December 2014

Dear Noah,

As winter sets in and 2014 advances to 2015, we thought this a perfect time to share our exciting advances: an APSF grant, our second HPHC safety grant, new publications, new people, and new developments that have only emphasized the need for office-based surgical safety.

Projects: APSF and HPHC Grants

An Anesthesia Patient Safety Foundation Grant, "Using Emergency Manuals During Interprofessional Crisis Management: Are There Unintended Consequences?" was awarded to Dr. Richard Urman and colleagues to assess the effectiveness and limitations of emergency manuals in the perioperative setting.

ISOBS received our second HPHC quality grant to evaluate adverse events and patient outcomes for procedures performed outside the operating room under moderate and deep sedation.

Patients: The Patient Safety Checklist

ISOBS has been engaging providers for years in the patient safety process, but now it's time to put the "patient" back in patient safety. With that in mind, we developed the first-of-its-kind ISOBS Patient Checklist \(ISOBS PC\). The ISOBS PC covers questions that patients should ask providers before undergoing any office-based procedure. Please feel free to download the ISOBS PC and encourage your patients to use it for their own empowerment and safety.

Personnel Advances: The ISOBS Team is Expanding Our Outreach...

Rohesh Fernando, MD was awarded a fellowship in cardiac anesthesia at the University of Pennsylvania.

Samir Jani MD, MPH was accepted into a fellowship in pain medicine at Weill Cornell Medical Center.

Noah Rosenberg, MD was accepted to the MBA program at Harvard Business School.

Congratulations to all!

The Need for Outpatient Safety: Joan Rivers

Events such as these continue to propel our mission to improve patient safety in the outpatient procedural and surgical setting.

ISOBS continues to advance its mission through new research, personnel, places and forge new collaborations. Please accept our sincere thanks and appreciation for your continued interest and support.

Good health, happiness, and peace,
